ARE THEY HOUNDED?

MPEAK BOYS CLAIM THE POLICE HAVE PERSECUTED THEM.

They Dare Not Appear in a Public Place-Unique Case of Two Young Men.

Very frequently the public is informed through the papers that the McPeaks have been again arrested. So frequently are items of this nature published that those who notice such things must be forced to believe that the McPeaks are very dangerous citizens. When there is an epidemic of crime such as there has been the past few weeks the McPeaks are locked up, not because they can be connected with the commission of the crime, but because they have a reputation on which arrests can be made at any time. Yet these young men are seldom convicted on any charge and the time they spend in the workhouse is for loitering or as known thieves. They naturally feel embittered toward the police, toward the courts and towards soclety, for they claim that they have been driven downward instead of elevated. They cannot help but believe that they are hounded, that they are ostracised from respectable people and that life contains no hope for them. They remain here where they are known instead of going elsewhere, for their parents live here. They are not model boys, although there is a question concerning what they might have been had different influences been thrown around them. At present it is impossible for them to obtain work because of their reputation and so often have they been pointed out by the police as dangerous characters that they feel a look of scorn as they walk the streets. They move as if pursued and expecting at each step to be arrested. They are now little more than outcasts. Have they been made such by the po-

The cases of John and Abe are the more interesting, for they figure most frequently in police affairs. They are yet young men whose parents are good people. Abe nd John spend most of their time in the workhouse on the charge of being known thieves. Frequently have they been arrested upon their release and sent back without an opportunity to go to work. These two young men have only fair educations, for they were wild as boys and cared less for education than other things. In the last five years John has been arrested twenty-two times. Eleven of these times has he been discharged. Seven of these times was he charged with no crime, being held as a known thief, and six times has he been fined and sent to the workhouse on such a charge. Three times he has been convicted for loitering. Only once has he been convicted of theft and that was each time he was found not guilty. Abe has been arrested twenty-seven times in the same period. Thirteen times has the charge against him been dismissed. Seven times he has been arrested as a known thief and nine times for loitering, and five times has he been made to serve in the workhouse for loitering and five times as a known thief. Several times have these two young men been arrested for some participation in the theft, yet neither has ever been to the penitentiary, it is claimed, and with the single exception they have never been convicted of theft. Friday morning the two brothers were in Police Court charged with loitering. They had been arrested the evening before by detectives McGuff and Kaehn, while standing near a crowd on North Pennsylvania street. Judge Cox released them against his will, for he stated that he believed them foes to society. The morning of their arrest they had been released from the workhouse, where they had been as known thieves. Judge Cox held that they could not be held for lottering, having been just released from the workhouse. The Mc-Peaks were consequently released, but they dare not enter a crowd; dare not attend any place of amusement; dare not attend any place of amusement; dare not give their names in applying for work. In speaking of their troubles, John said to the Journal:

"When I was a boy, too young to know the difference between right and wrong, I stole a buggy whip. I was caught and sent to the Reform School, where I learned more than I previously knew I came from than I previously knew. I came from the school intending to go to work and be respectable, but one day I was arrested as a known thief. I swear that I committed no crime since I stole the whip. I was con-victed as a known thief and branded as one, and when I got out I found I had a bad reputation. From that time on my troubles grew. Every time there was a pocket picked or a house robbed the police would say, 'the McPeaks know something of it.' We boys were put in every time anything happened. For a while I rebelled and swore that I would overcome the prejudice against me. The arrests kept on and I spent much of my time in the workhouse. spent much of my time in the workhouse. I grew careless and didn't care much what happened. I could go no place without being watched, and at every turn I made I was reminded that I was a known thief I am no saint—never claimed to be—but I do say that if I had not been dogged after I came from the Reform School I would have been a decent sort of a citizen. "They tell us now that we are thieves. They have no convictions to show for it. If we are thieves why do we stay here to be arrrested every three months? If we are as slick as the police say, we could do as well any place as in Indianapolis.

made to feel that everybody knows what we are. We cannot go to the theater without being arrested and we dare not go where there is public speaking of any kind. We cannot walk along Washington street. We cannot go in the stores. We are afraid to tell people our names and we dare not ask for work under the name. My God, people don't realize what it is to feel all the time that people are after you and trying to down you. A fellow can't help but feel that this is a tough world. We are called thieves and it is something terrible to have the reputation of being a thief and feel that the police are after you all the time. I swear to you that I am not doing any dirty work and I haven't done any. I know I am pretty tough, but I ain't a thief."

Abe, in speaking of the arrests of himself and brother, said:

"We boys are human like everybody else. We have got feelings and I tell you "We boys are human like everybody else. We have got feelings and I tell you it hurts like everything to be dogged around all the time. Look at the times we have been arrrested and the times the cases have been dismissed. It doesn't look like we have been doing very much. We can't get a fair hearing in a court because the judge says he is prejudiced against us. I know we are not the right kind of citizens, but the police made us what we are. Let some one spot you out and call you a thief for six or seven years, and let you be helpless, and I tell you, you won't think much of yourself. Why, we are spied everywhere and we can't go to the funeral of a friend without having the police after us. We boys like to hear good speeches and good things for we know they will do us good. One of us went up to a church the other night to hear some speaking and he says he felt Hats, Gloves, Canes, hear some speaking and he says he felt everybody was looking at him and pointing him out as a known thief all the time he was there. There was nothing stolen that night, but if a policeman had been there my brother would have been arrested right away. I tell you we have to sneak in going to a church, and it is all because we know the police can arrest us and send us to the workhouse with no cause at all. "How did we get this reputation? Well, when we were kids we lived near Al Kerr, who has served time. We were kids with him and associated with him before he went wrong. John stole a buggy whip. Kerr was afterward arrested and from that day to this the cops have associated us with him and called us thieves for no other rea-> would not be a lot worse than we are, if they had been persecuted like we have been." An afternoon paper said a few evenings ago that among the police it was a belief that the McPeaks were stool pigeons for some detective and thereby was explained the large number of times they have been dismissed. Speaking of this Abe said:

> "I hate a thief and if I was one I ought to be in the penitentiary. I have never been there. I hate a 'snitch' or 'stool pigeon' worse than I do a thief. We have been dismissed simply because there has been nothing against us. We boys are trying to get jobs now and want to be respectable if the police don't arrest us the first time we come down town and cause us to lose our jobs. down town and cause us to lose our jobs.
> But you see if they don't give us away the > first time we get work."

son than that we knew him as a boy. They commenced on us as known thieves. We didn't steal and get our reputations in that way. I tell you there are few fellows who

NEW BEEF-PACKING PLANT.

Meuser & Co. Will Add to Their Business-The Kingan Deal.

The indications point to a remarkable impetus in the local beef packing industry. The sale of the Moore Packing Company's plant to Kingan & Company, as told in the Journal yesterday, means a large increase in the receipts of cattle at this point, for the conversion of the Moore plant into a beef packing house will increase the demand for cattle. Meuser & Co., pork packers, announced yesterday that they will soon have a beef packing plant in operation in addition to their pork packing plant. Their establishment is on West Ray street. The firm is putting in an economical refrigerating plant, which is said to revolutionize the process of packing house refrigerating. It will have a capacity of doing the work of three tons of ice a day. For the process it is claimed that it is automatic, requiring no further expense or trouble save the power, which is but two-thirds that required for other processes. Meuser & Co. will kill about seventy-five head of cattle a day.

It is said the prospects of Indianapolis as a cattle market have brightened fully 30 per cent. in the last month. More buyers are appearing from the East. Meanwhile the hog market grows well. Last Thursday there were 11,000 hogs in the stock yards. Most of the cattle handled there are from the West, not a great many of the Southwestern animals being received.

It is stated that at a meeting of the directors of the Stock Yards Company, at which the packing house negotiations were considered, the expenses of the stock yards management were also discussed and it was believed by some of the directors that the salary of President Ijams should be reduced from $6,000 a year to $3,600. Mr. Ijams's friends say he would resign if such a reduction should be made, while others say there is no probaility of any action in the matter.

TWO MORE PARDONS.

A Bit of Humor in the Advice the Governor Gave.

Governor Matthews yesterday granted a pardon to Joseph Wagner, of South Bend, who was convicted last May of grand larceny and sent to the northern penitentiary for one year. He was a young plumber and, being out of work, became loose in his habits. He was arrrested with a gang of tramps who had broken into a freight car and stolen a lot of clothing. He was in company with some other boys of the town at the time. His trial came first and he was convicted on circumstantial evidence. When the others came to trial they were acquitted on the same evidence. It was always supposed, it is claimed at the Governor's office, that the town boys joined the tramps after the car had been robbbed. The petitions in the case were

There is nearly $103,-009,000 of this amount that consists of running, paidup shares and debentures—the remainder is, strictly speaking, capital stock. In other words, the holders of $1.0,000,000 of the assets of these eighty-two associations receive a definite interest at specified times, and maturity periods are fixed. This definite contract plan is also targely used in Germany, also in Englan In the United States definite contracts in the building In the United States definite contracts in the building and loan business began to be used nearly eight years ago. In the past year furly one-half of the new 'national' associations in the United states were organized under the definite-contract plan. In New York, Providence, Washington, Chicago, Deliver, Minneapolis, Cha tanooga, St. Paul, Cleveland, St. Louis, Louis-ville, New Orleans, Dallas, San Francisco and in many other large cities of the United States there have been for several years large and prosucrous associations. associations have assets of nearly $2,0,0,000 each. "Estimated" maturities are growing more and more unsatisfactory. Loss of employment, or sickness, all too often brings to the shareholder the necessity of knowing precisely the value of his investments in building and loan shares.

If the borrower has an opportunity to sell his property at a handsome profit he or the purchaser wants to know definitely how much is due upon the mortgage.
"Withdrawal fees" are particularly objectionable.
There are none of these in the definite-contract plan.
A look at the certificate of shares of a definite-contra : association will at any time reveal to its holder that he can withdraw, not only all he has invested, but a definite amount of interest beside. These amounts are fixed, and either the investor or borrower can de-termine precise results before any money is paid on

After exhaustive consideration an Indiana associa-tion has adopted the definite-contract plan. Over $7,000 has been expended in the preparation of tables and in gathering data on which the definite contract made with each of its members is based. Experience made with each of its members is based. Experience and skill has been obtained in its official management. Safety is sought before anything eise.
